Brooklyn Bridge and Beyond: Taste Brooklyn Heights and Walk Across the Brooklyn Bridge

Taste sensations such as coal-oven pizza from Grimaldi's and delicious ice cream fill you up before you walk across the Brooklyn Bridge.

It can certainly be a little intimidating for New York City visitors to head out into "the boroughs." For the most part, this fear is more of the unknown and the possibility of getting lost (though I have to admit, getting lost can be both enlightening and a bit exciting) than of any legitimate difficulties with the boroughs. This taste of Brooklyn will keep you well within sight of the Manhattan skyline while offering you the opportunity to get a taste of the city that is truly New York.

This journey takes a few hours, and in my opinion, is best done in the late afternoon so that as you walk across the Brooklyn Bridge, the nighttime skyline of the city can welcome you back to Manhattan.

To get started, take the A or C train (blue line) to the High Street stop, which is one stop outside of Manhattan. The first stop on our tour is Grimaldi's. To get there, from High St, walk north 125 yards on Cadman Plaza East (The first street you should pass is Sands St.) Take a left onto Prospect St and go another 100 yards. Turn right on to Old Fulton St. you'll find Grimaldi's at 19 Old Fulton St.

Make sure not to get too full at Grimaldi's, because other taste sensations await you as you continue on this journey.

Brooklyn Bridge & Beyond: Grimaldi's Pizzeria

Grimaldi's is a strong contender for the best pizza in New York City.

Once you arrive in Brooklyn Heights, the first thing to do is have pizza a Grimaldi's. Their coal oven pizza is delicious and is among the best pizza in New York City. For more advice about Grimaldi's read this review of Grimaldi's.

Brooklyn Bridge & Beyond: Brooklyn Bridge Bound

It's about a five to ten minute walk to the Brooklyn Bridge promenade.

To get to the Brooklyn Bridge Promenade, walk back up Old Fulton Street toward Grimaldi's. Take a left onto Cadman Plaza West, and you'll see signs for the promenade. Enjoy the view!
